Davison Insurance Agency: From One Generation to the Next

After working for the same Chicago-area insurance company for 40 years, Clifford Davison thought he and his wife, Anna Marie, deserved to retire. While they moved to Boerne, Texas to do exactly that, Anna Marie had other ideas.

In 1982, Anna Marie started Davison Insurance, a specialty independent insurance agency in Boerne. At first, Anna Marie worked out of her home. In 1994, she moved to the office building on Main Street that houses Davison Insurance today. And Anna Marie had the last laugh—Clifford ended up joining her in the business.

While both Davisons have since passed away, their daughter Patrice, who joined the firm in 1994, carries on the family business. Just as her father worked side-by-side with her mother, Patrice's husband, Chip Marshall, joined Davison Insurance Agency, LLC in 2002. Today, with two employees, the full-service insurance agency represents specialty insurance companies to provide home, property, casualty, auto, health and life insurance.

When asked what accounts for the agency's longevity in such a competitive market, Patrice credits hard work, excellent customer service and her employees. "We strive to provide the same personal service to our clients that my mother did when she started Davison Insurance twenty-six years ago," she said. "We are now writing insurance coverage for the second and third generations of my mother's clients. She would be so proud."
